Accès concurrent subvariant BA.2 antigène
Détection rapide du SARS-CoV-2 (COVID-19)
Pour un usage professionnel
Découvrez nos tests

In rare cases, coronavirus vaccines may cause Long Covid–like symptoms

Long Covid, a mysterious, often disabling set of symptoms that can linger for months or years after a COVID-19 infection, may be a rare side effect of coronavirus vaccines, studies in Israel and the United Kingdom suggest. The findings mean that people who have received COVID-19 vaccines should be aware of the potential risk, researchers say.

Science
Science Careers
Science Translational Medicine
Science Advances
Science Immunology
Science Robotics
Science Signaling
Science Partner Journals
AAAS Publications
Subscribe to Science Magazine
Subscribe to Science Careers
Subscribe to Science Translational Medicine
Subscribe to Science Advances
Subscribe to Science Immunology
Subscribe to Science Robotics
Subscribe to Science Signaling
Subscribe to Science Partner Journals
Subscribe to AAAS Publications
Subscribe to Science Magazine
Subscribe to Science Careers
Subscribe to Science Translational Medicine
Subscribe to Science Advances
Subscribe to Science Immunology
Subscribe to Science Robotics
Subscribe to Science Signaling
Subscribe to Science Partner Journals
Subscribe to AAAS Publications

Accès concurrent subvariant BA.2 antigène
Détection rapide du SARS-CoV-2 (COVID-19)
Pour un usage professionnel
Découvrez nos tests

Science
Science Careers
Science Translational Medicine
Science Advances
Science Immunology
Science Robotics
Science Signaling
Science Partner Journals
AAAS Publications
Subscribe to Science Magazine
Subscribe to Science Careers
Subscribe to Science Translational Medicine
Subscribe to Science Advances
Subscribe to Science Immunology
Subscribe to Science Robotics
Subscribe to Science Signaling
Subscribe to Science Partner Journals
Subscribe to AAAS Publications